ASSURANCE GIVEN BRITISH COLUMBIA SUBSIDY CONTINUES

B.C. Lumbermen Headed by Premier Tolmie Succeeded in Renewing Vital Cargo Service to Orient —Success Confirmed in Wire to H. D. Twigg, M.P.P.—Tenders to Be Called at Once

SUCCESS of the British Columbia lumber delegation, headed by Premier Tolmie, in securing renewal of the Dominion subsidy on lumber shipments from this province to the Orient was announced last evening by H. D. Twigg, M.P.P., after receipt of a direct wire from Premier Tolmie saying tenders will be called immediately by the Federal Government for renewal and possible extension of the service.

Renewal and extension of the subsidized service on lumber to the China market was one of the main points sought by the delegation, others having a bearing on the Imperial Economic Conference.

Tenders for resumption of the subsidy are returnable in July when the present assisted service expires, and will call for British Columbia loading exclusively, with vessels of from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 feet lumber load capacity, to take grain and general cargo as well. British vessels are to have the preference.

ATTENTIVE HEARING
In his wire to Mr. Twigg, who is provincial organizer of the British Columbia Conservative party, Premier Tolmie said the lumber delegation received a most attentive hearing by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and the Dominion Cabinet on Tuesday. The result of the decision to renew the subsidy was made known to Premier Tolmie yesterday at the Federal capital and confirmed immediately by Dominion officials.

The tenders will call for a service to include Victoria, Vancouver, New Westminster, Port Alberni and Fraser River loadings on a monthly basis. If business warrants, the frequency of the subsidized service will be increased, on the plea of the lumbermen that two to three sailings a month may prove necessary for the business offering.

WHOLLY B.C. BENEFIT
As a special encouragement to the export trade generally from British Columbia ports, it is provided that the city will apply only to a service of vessels capable of taking large lumber cargoes, and general and grain cargoes in addition. These vessels further, valued load wholly within British Columbia, insuring to this province all of the benefit from the assisted cargo service to the Orient.

In commenting on the news, Mr. Twigg stressed the fact that continuation and probable extension of

REFUND ISSUE IS SUBSCRIBED

City Receives Application for Large Block if Second Loan Floated

In a last-minute rush before the holiday recess, nearly all of the city's $200,000 refunding loan was subscribed. It was announced yesterday by Alderman P. R. Brown, chairman of the finance committee.

"The public has supported the over-the-counter sale wonderfully well," said Mr. Brown, "and has decided to absorb the small remaining amount by investing some of its committee trust funds in the issue," the alderman declared.

MANY INQUIRIES
Within the past forty-eight hours nearly all of the remaining 25 per cent of the issue was taken up, and inquiries were made as to whether the city proposed to market any portion of the $200,000 loan in a similar manner.

Alderman Brown said he already had received applications for $15,000 worth of city bonds, should another $200,000 issue be placed on the market.

PLAN SECOND ISSUE
He said the finance committee was considering selling the remaining $200,000 of the city's $200,000 loan through the treasury department. Three hundred thousand dollars of this loan is now being marketed in the East. So many inquiries have been made for bonds of small denomination that it is quite probable that the city will issue the next debentures in units as low as fifty dollars.

The fact that the city has decided to invest committee funds in their bonds will not affect applications left unfilled or that are now being made. Provision was made for this so that the subscriptions could be tapered off without any investor being penalized due to the fact that they may have allowed the sale funds to remain in the bank until the end of the interest rate period.

Paper as Usual
THE Colonist will publish as usual on Saturday. The Broad Street offices will be closed today until 6 o'clock in the evening, when the advertising department will open to receive classified advertisements and change of copy until 10 o'clock.

Nation Celebrates Birthday

TODAY the Dominion of Canada celebrates her sixty-fifth anniversary. Inset in the above layout is shown Sir John A. Macdonald, one of the Fathers of Confederation, and Canada's first premier, whose life's dream was a united Canada. Sixty-five years after the signing of the British North America Act, the Parliament Buildings of the Canadian capital (above) will be the meeting place of the delegates to the Imperial Conference from all the countries of the British Empire.

Democrats Spend Night in Session Without Voting

Speeches and Wild Demonstrations Keep Convention From Balloting—Roosevelt Supporters Refuse to Adjourn Without Taking Vote—Nine Candidates for Presidential Nomination

CHICAGO STADIUM, July 1.—Tangled in one of the most spectacular night sessions in convention history, the Democrats overwhelmingly refused at 3 o'clock this morning to adjourn and went wearily ahead toward a ballot on the nomination of a candidate. The vote was 863 1/2 to 281 1/2.

Senator Connally of Texas moved the adjournment after many hours had been spent in nominating and seconding speeches and demonstrations, without any sign of reaching a start on the all-important ballot.

Roosevelt, Smith, Ritchie, Byrd, Garner, Traylor, Reed, Murray and White were piled high with praising adjectives as their perspiring sponsors paraded, spoke and cheered in their behalf.

AGAINST ADJOURNMENT
The roll call showed the Roosevelt managers holding their lines solidly against an adjournment. They were joined by several large blocs among the non-Roosevelt delegates.

Just before the vote, Alfred E. Smith showed up at the Stadium. He started for the floor, which was in noisy confusion at the time, but turned about instead and entered a side room, where he conferred with leaders in his cause.

THREE-CENT MARGIN
At last night's meeting it was decided to stabilize the price at thirty cents, which gives the dealers and service stations a three-cent profit on each gallon, which is one cent less than in Vancouver.

The compromise was reached between the initiators and it is expected the thirty-cent rate will remain during the summer months.

PREMIERS AFFIRM THEIR ADHERENCE
CANBERRA, Australia, June 30 (CP).—All Premiers of Australia, Commonwealth and State alike, joined unanimously at the Premiers' conference today to pass a resolution affirming their adherence to the Premiers' plan for the restoration of balanced budgets.

The only official opponent of the orthodox financial policy was Pagan Smith, leader of the victorious Labor party in the recent Queensland elections, and Smith today dashed the hopes of extremists by concurring wholeheartedly with the remainder of the Premiers.

The Premiers agreed to meet all interest payments as they come due and progressively reduce the budget deficits.

Control of Radio Taken by State

CANBERRA, Australia, July 1 (CP).—Wireless broadcasting in Australia, at least from Class "A" stations, which in the majority are the most powerful, came under state control today in Australia.

Broadcasting from these stations is now under control of a non-political commission appointed by the Government.

IMPROVEMENT IN INDIA INDICATED BY GOVERNMENT
SIMLA, June 30 (CP).—Improvement in the situation in India was indicated tonight by the announcement that on renewal of the Government's special powers of ordinance next week, certain provisions of the drastic ordinances promulgated last winter will be dropped.

The Government of India, however, warns that if there is any renewal of the widespread disturbances, accompanied by irresponsible terrorism, that broke out coincidentally with the Nationalist Congress' civil disobedience campaign in January, all emergency powers will again be applied.

PREPARE FOR BATTLE WITH MAINLANDERS
Defending Forces Man Lower Island for Night Attack
DESTROYERS CONVEY TROOPS TO ISLAND

In preparation for the defence of Victoria against 800 attacking troops from the Mainland, which were transported across the Gulf of Georgia by His Majesty's Canadian ships Skeena, Vancouver and Armentieres, military units were massed at the Bay Street Army last night, ready to be taken to any part of the Lower Island within half an hour.

At 1 o'clock this morning there was no sign of the invaders, but strategic points to send word in that they had sighted the attackers preparing a landing. Scouting parties left at regular intervals from the Army, but no reports had been received from them at a late hour.

DEFENDING FORCES
Forces at the Army included the 1st and 2nd battalions of the 18th Canadian Scottish Regiment, with Lieut.-Col. Roy Sargent, officer commanding the latter unit, in direct command. Artillery forces of the 58th Field and 12th Heavy Battalion were attached, while the 62nd Battalion, of Duncan, fully horsed, was out in full force.

Col. Donald B. Martyn, officer commanding the 18th Canadian Scottish Regiment, was in charge of the defending forces, with Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown, C.M.G., D.S.O., officer commanding M.D. No. 3.

THE BRITISH IDEA
The British idea was to get reparations settled among the nations concerned as a preliminary to wider action, with the United States, to the war debts and general economic questions.

France will accept no settlement of reparations along the lines that have been discussed—elimination of annual payments and substitution of a lump sum deposited by Germany in the world bank—unless it contained a clause safeguarding France against the possibility that the United States might refuse to consider war debts.

NEITHER WILL BULGE
Prime Minister MacDonald counselled the Germans to accept the reparations clause, saying they used have no fear with regard to action that might be taken by the United States, but the conference was in peace and the anxieties of war had been confronted with the problems of peace and the anxieties of war.

But at all times Canadians have stood true to the Empire and to themselves. The unity of our people has remained unimpaired, and notwithstanding the world-wide depression the courage and optimism remain undiminished.

ESPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE
This Dominion Day is of special significance, for it comes on the eve of the Imperial Economic Conference soon to meet in our capital city of Ottawa. It is our earnest hope that by the end of the year in our history that this conference may mark another milestone in our national growth and that it will result in a more united Empire.

Entomologists were summoned on the run, to repel the attack. Paper is to ewigs what catnip is to cats and cougars. Visions of valuable stocks of Government paper being consumed before they were even touched with printer's ink left the defence forces aghast. The insects suffered for their daring, for the bucket brigade was recalled from the suburbs and set to work on the Legislative Grounds to repair the visible breach in the defences in the ceaseless warfare of insects against man.

SEVEN KILLED IN TRAIN COLLISION
HAMILTON, June 7.—Seven persons were killed and five injured in a head-on collision of a fast electric passenger car and a heavily-loaded freight car of the Cincinnati & Lake Erie Railroad today.

The two cars met only 100 feet from a siding where they were supposed to pass near Trenton, three miles north of Hamilton. The heavy freight car, southbound from Northampton, Ohio, crashed through the middle of the lighter car, crushing the motorman and passengers amid the wreckage of steel and wood.

PREMIERS AFFIRM THEIR ADHERENCE
CANBERRA, Australia, June 30 (CP).—All Premiers of Australia, Commonwealth and State alike, joined unanimously at the Premiers' conference today to pass a resolution affirming their adherence to the Premiers' plan for the restoration of balanced budgets.

The only official opponent of the orthodox financial policy was Pagan Smith, leader of the victorious Labor party in the recent Queensland elections, and Smith today dashed the hopes of extremists by concurring wholeheartedly with the remainder of the Premiers.

The Premiers agreed to meet all interest payments as they come due and progressively reduce the budget deficits.

HARDENING ATTITUDE
President de Valera, nevertheless, was believed to be hardening his attitude towards Great Britain. It was authoritatively reported he is contemplating retaliation in the shape of a new and drastic series of tariffs on British products.

The Associated Chamber of Commerce, in Dublin meeting tonight, passed a resolution expressing the tendency of de Valera's Government to drift from the British Commonwealth. The resolution also asked Free States delegates to the Ottawa Conference to "insure" that

BRITAIN WILL CONVERT HUGE LOAN, CHANCELLOR ANNOUNCES

Move Vindicates British Credit in Eyes of World

LONDON, June 30 (CP).—Great Britain has recovered freedom of action in monetary matters and is in a mood for great enterprises, declared Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announcing in the House of Commons tonight the Government's plan for converting war loan bonds from 5 per cent to 3 1/2 per cent interest.

The conversion will effect a gross saving of £30,000,000 by 1933, it is estimated, offset by a reduction of about £23,000,000 in receipts from the income tax surtax, leaving a net saving of £6,000,000.

NOTE OF CONFIDENCE
And Great Britain, the Chancellor added, was able and determined to carry great enterprises through to a successful conclusion. It was his confident hope that the great mass of war loan holders would convert their bonds to the lower rate.

"Great Britain," the Chancellor said, "is in the fortunate position that the relative merits of British and Government securities, by comparison with all other securities—British and foreign—were never more amply recognized by the world at large."

COMPLETE VINDICATION
"It is a complete vindication of British credit in the eyes of the world, and a complete vindication of the National Government," declared Sir Godfrey Collins, on behalf of the Liberals.

The scheme received the blessing of the entire House of Commons when George Lansbury, Labour leader, said he was delighted that at last an effort had been made to put the enormous debt on a better footing.

BANK RATE REDUCED
Earlier in the day the Bank of England reduced its discount rate from 2-1/2 to 2 per cent.

The bank rate was reduced on May 12 from 3-1/2 to 3 per cent, the second reduction in less than a month. The rate was lowered on April 21 from 3-1/2 to 3 per cent.

The bank rate stood at 6 per cent from the time Great Britain went off the gold standard last Fall until February 18, when a series of cuts was started which, in little more than a year, had brought it down to 2 per cent.

CONFIDENT ON DOMINION DAY
Premier Bennett Draws Attention to Special Significance of Birthday

OTTAWA, June 30 (CP).—Coming on the eve of the Imperial Conference, which will assemble in Ottawa July 21, Canada's birthday tomorrow assumed a special significance, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, says in a Dominion Day message to the people of this country, issued here tonight.

"Sixty-five years ago our Dominion first faced the world," the Prime Minister says. "During the intervening years, as our development has proceeded so have our duties and responsibilities grown. We have been confronted with the problems of peace and the anxieties of war."

But at all times Canadians have stood true to the Empire and to themselves. The unity of our people has remained unimpaired, and notwithstanding the world-wide depression the courage and optimism remain undiminished.

ESPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE
This Dominion Day is of special significance, for it comes on the eve of the Imperial Economic Conference soon to meet in our capital city of Ottawa. It is our earnest hope that by the end of the year in our history that this conference may mark another milestone in our national growth and that it will result in a more united Empire.

Entomologists were summoned on the run, to repel the attack. Paper is to ewigs what catnip is to cats and cougars. Visions of valuable stocks of Government paper being consumed before they were even touched with printer's ink left the defence forces aghast. The insects suffered for their daring, for the bucket brigade was recalled from the suburbs and set to work on the Legislative Grounds to repair the visible breach in the defences in the ceaseless warfare of insects against man.

NO SECOND ELEVEN
"Do not be under any misapprehension," said Mr. Thomas, "we are not sending a 'second eleven' to Canada." The British Government had proved it was convinced the success of the conference was essential to the future prosperity of the Empire, he added.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson read messages from Prime Minister MacDonald, Minister R. B. Bennett, at Ottawa.

Earwigs Deliver Telling Attack on King's Printer
While provincial and city officers, buckets of poisoned beer in hand, scoured the outer confines of Victoria and district yesterday, hosts of earwigs slipped through their guard and delivered a frontal attack on the King's Printer, right within view of the offices of the British Columbia Department of Agriculture. By tens, hundreds, and countless thousands, the insects marched around the base of a corrugated iron building beside the printer on Superior Street, which, like the walls of Jericho, stood frowning down on the city.

One earwig, a scout no doubt, penetrated to the office of His Majesty's Printer, Charles P. Bennett, where it was impaled by a stenographer, later mentioned in dispatches for her bravery. This earwig, it is thought, was in reality searching for the Provincial Information Bureau, immediately below the King's Printer.

Entomologists were summoned on the run, to repel the attack. Paper is to ewigs what catnip is to cats and cougars. Visions of valuable stocks of Government paper being consumed before they were even touched with printer's ink left the defence forces aghast. The insects suffered for their daring, for the bucket brigade was recalled from the suburbs and set to work on the Legislative Grounds to repair the visible breach in the defences in the ceaseless warfare of insects against man.

AGRICULTURAL DELEGATES NAMED
LONDON, June 30 (CP).—L. G. S. Astry, former Secretary for the Dominion, who is well known in Canada, and V. A. Macdonald, will represent the Central and Associated Chambers of Agriculture of Great Britain at the Imperial Conference at Ottawa, it was announced today.

St. Michael's School Prize-Giving Is Held

Big Gathering Witnesses Interesting Demonstrations by Pupils at Twenty-Second Annual Affair—High Scholarship Standard Maintained

The twenty-second annual prize giving of St. Michael's School, held Wednesday afternoon in the gardens of G. E. Merrill, 935 Poul Bay Road, attracted the customary large gathering of parents and other friends of the school. Following the excellent displays of manual drill and Scout and Cub work, there were brief speeches by L. G. Tolson, speaking in the absence of the headmaster, E. C. Symons, by Archdeacon Laycock, who presented the prizes, and by Kyrie Symons. The proceedings concluded with tea, served in the gardens, the boys assisting with the serving.

Manual drill, in charge of C. E. Lee and Captain Massey, and consisting of physical exercises, manual drill and changing of the guard, was so smartly carried out that it provoked considerable applause, the changing of the guard giving a particularly fine demonstration of the good training in discipline and quick response to the commands which the boys are receiving. The boys who were officers in charge during the changing of the guard, particularly merit notice, being E. Williams, C. Sworcer and G. Roberts. The pyramid formations were also neatly done, this display being in charge of Kyrie Symons.

Some interesting exhibitions were given by St. Michael's troop Scouts in charge of C. Symons, the background representing a camp site, with kitchen, tent and other paraphernalia complete.

ASSURANCE GIVEN
BRITISH COLUMBIA
SUBSIDY CONTINUES

The subsidy which was due to expire within a few weeks, would end encouragement to the lumber industry. The Orient is regarded as the best available market for British Columbia lumber in the lower grades, formerly sent to the United States. Imposition of a feet shut off this movement, which totaled $17,000,000 feet even in the low volume year of 1931. American lumber shipments to the Orient are heavily subsidized.

TRADE WAS LAUNCHED
Two years ago the Dominion Government granted the initial subsidy, under which $22,000 was paid out in assisted cargo passage in the lumber trade from Pacific ports to the Orient. The British Columbia exports to China picked up immediately, rising from 30,000,000 feet in 1928-29, to 54,000,000 feet last year alone, much grain being carried in addition from the Vancouver terminal elevators.

At the last session of Parliament the subsidy on shipments to China was eliminated and would have expired next month.

Meanwhile, the whole picture of British Columbia's export lumber trade has changed, and the Orient market is essential to absorb that proportion of the annual cut which formerly went to the United States.

Other points in the British Columbia lumbermen's brief were also taken up at Ottawa, but will be reserved for the Imperial Conference. These asked a quota and a preference in the United Kingdom market, in exchange for extensive buying of British goods in return.

DELEGATION GRATIFIED
In his wire to Mr. Twigg, Premier Tolmie said the British Columbia delegation had been received most courteously and were well pleased with the immediate steps taken to act on one plank in their platform for the revival of the lumber industry.

No official statement was forthcoming from the Republican Government, the only announcement today being that the annuities payment had not been made. The view is strongly held here that the developments will compel President de Valera to hold a new general election to test the opinion of the electorate.

SPEEDY ACTION
LONDON, June 30 (CP).—Government supporters cheered in the House of Commons this afternoon when J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, announced that next Monday he would submit proposals for dealing with the situation arising from the Irish Free State's non-payment of the land annuities instalment, which fell due today.

These proposals will be for imposition of special duties on goods from the Irish Free State, the revenue from which will be calculated to equal the amount of the defaulted annuities, which are $3,000,000 each calendar year.

It was learned in parliamentary circles tonight the rate of the proposed new duties on Irish goods would be up to 100 per cent ad valorem.

The 38th Field Ambulance Corps, "A" Company of the 11th Machine Gun Corps, the 17th Fortress Company and the Fortress Signal Company, were also attached to the defence forces.

COMMANDS ATTACKERS
Aboard ship, in charge of the attackers, was Col. W. W. Foster, officer commanding the 2nd Infantry Brigade, consisting of the following regiments: British Columbia Regiment, Westminster Regiment, Seaforth Highlanders Regiment, Irish Fusiliers Regiment, supported by the 15th Artillery Brigade, under Lieut. Col. Perry; a detachment of the British Columbia Light Horse Artillery, the 11th Machine Gun Corps, the 11th Divisional Train, the 17th Field Ambulance, the 6th Field Company of Canadian Engineers and the C.O.P.C. of the University of British Columbia.

Airplanes of the Royal Canadian Air Force detachment at Vancouver will also take part.

MAKE FINAL PLANS
Officers in charge were busily engaged late last night in making final preparations and efforts to secure information of the enemy's landing. The defending forces number about 500.

The lower end of the island has been divided into four sections, each controlled by a signal officer. When the attack was made, the officer commanding this section assumed full control of the defence.

Umpires for the battle included Vancouver representatives, under Lieut. Col. A. V. Tremaine, and Victoria officers, under Col. H. C. Greer.

REPORTS ARE VARIED

Amidst the din, contrary reports continually circulated. One was to the effect that Missouri would cast forty votes for Roosevelt on the first ballot after paying its compliments to a favorite son, James A. Reed.

Another claimed a dicker with the controllers of the ninety John N. Garner votes, California and Texas. Their theory was that Garner could not get the nomination and would, if assured of his selection as the vice-presidential choice of Roosevelt, throw his strength to the Governor.

This was the inside "dope" while speakers exhorted the perspiring crowd, and nomination of Roosevelt, Garner, Alfred E. Smith, Richard Byrd, Governor of Virginia; Melvin T. Taylor, Chicago banker, were made. The shout of each name precipitated a riot of music and howling, demonstration continuing as long as the legs and lungs of each faction held out.

RITCHIE IS NAMED
A demonstration following the naming for nomination of Governor Ritchie had begun at the stroke of midnight, but the celebrating Marylanders did not seem to have been tired at all by the long day of waiting. They kept on past 12:30.

After forty minutes, the Ritchie outburst petered out and Walsh ordered the roll call to proceed.

When at last Missouri was reached on the roll, Sam W. Fordyce, of St. Louis, nominated former Senator James A. Reed. At the very outset he announced no demonstration was coming, and got a good hand on that.

Support for Roosevelt in the hour's demonstration following his nomination by John E. Mack, a New York judge, in a lengthy and quiet speech, was found widely scattered. Soberly these delegations paraded around the hall to the tune of "Anchor's Aweigh" and "United States Marines," in honor of the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy. It was a determined but not enthusiastic performance.

WILD DEMONSTRATION
On the contrary, when it came to Governor Ely, of Massachusetts, bawling into the microphone, "I ask you to search your hearts and souls . . . and I give you the name of Alfred Emmanuel Smith." The entire stadium started to rise on its hind legs and lift up its voice in a mighty yell. There followed the wildest demonstration of either the Republican or Democratic convention.

Letting the rank and file do the shouting, the Roosevelt managers busied themselves to do all possible to assure a successful outcome.

Strength on the first ballot that a break in the opposition would come to put the New York governor beyond the two-thirds majority needed.

Many speeches had to be heard before balloting could begin, each of the candidates being seconded again and again.

PLATFORM ADOPTED
Aware of the long and nerve-racking session ahead, the convention on meeting summarily dispatched all save one of the attempts to amend the platform—then with the widest demonstration of either the Republican or Democratic convention.

Roars of "No" decisively rejected amendments proposed to favor immediate scaling in the veterans' bonus, to sanction bimetallism, approve congressional representation for the District of Columbia and the McClellan amendment to recommend Federal assistance against losses of depositors in banks of the Federal Reserve System.

ROOSEVELT'S VICTORY
The injured man, who is familiarly known as "Cyclone," was still unconscious today. His sister, Mrs. F. G. Eshaw, Vancouver, was notified and "on her way here."

Smith is thirty-seven years of age and was born at Riverside, Wash. He came to this country in 1917 and has been here ever since.

BERLIN, June 30 (AP).—Several students were injured in a free-for-all battle between Nazi and anti-Nazi undergraduates at the University of Berlin today and so intense became the melee that it was necessary to close the university for the day. It might be shut down again tomorrow.

The quarrel broke out between lecture periods in the corridors, when Nazi students started shouting "Out with the Jews."

MUNICIPAL UNION WILL MEET HERE

Ald. J. A. Worthington Back From Nelson With Review of Work Accomplished

COMMITTEE TO MEET
EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Alderman John A. Worthington, chairman of the parks committee, was the first of the city's delegates to the Nelson convention of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities to return here, with the news that the next convention will be held in Victoria during the next session of the Legislature.

"We had a busy time, probably the busiest session that ever has been held by the union," Alderman Worthington declared.

RELIEF QUESTION
"Of course, the unemployment relief question was paramount. No definite decision recommendations were made except to notify both the Dominion and Provincial Governments that the municipalities were now in a position that they could no longer handle the relief question and that the governments would have to deal with the question themselves," he stated.

A special committee was appointed to wait upon the Provincial Cabinet some time next week and take up the question of direct relief, Alderman Worthington remarked.

JOINT CONFERENCE
A special committee also was appointed to wait upon a committee of school trustees and the Minister of Education in connection with school costs. It was the general opinion of the convention that the council should have more control of the school finances, Alderman Worthington said. Some favored a merger of the school board with the council, but this will be threshed out at the joint conference.

The convention will ask the Government to give municipalities power to allow mortgages on tax sale land so as to encourage home construction, and application will be made to the Provincial Government to have a plebiscite taken on the sweepstakes question.

SAANICH MOVE
Saanich failed to get any support for a motion that the Government be asked to pass legislation making it compulsory for residents in its municipality and similar municipalities to install septic tanks.

After the convention Alderman Worthington drove to Spokane where he visited the parks there and was entertained by the mayor and council, who were much interested in the handling of the unemployment question in Canada.

"Here, young man, you shouldn't hit that boy when he's down," "G'wan! What'd you think I got him down for?"

Sinclair Tries Out Club's Hospitality As Uninvited Guest

Finds Luxury in Penang After 700 Nauseating Knots Ending With Searching Examination by Chinese Woman Doctor at Quarantine

By GORDON SINCLAIR
(Special to The Colonist. Copyright, 1932.)

PENANG, Straits Settlements, May 6.—The yellow quarantine flag of an infected ship climbed to the foremast as our steam sloop, for man-hunting cockroaches and job-hunting pagans dropped anchor off this beautiful port today after one of those voyages that leaves you feeling like the inside of a vacuum cleaner.

From Rangoon to Singapore is 1,078 miles or less than half-way across the Atlantic. The Empress of Britain does the whole Atlantic in five days, while this tub takes the same time for 700 noisy nauseating knots.

Night and day a screaming Lascar shouts "All's well" from somewhere up ahead, and the smell of stale food floats down on the wind. We carry three white passengers and 675 assorted others. Each clan has its own beany and most of them have enshrined mud statues of some ferocious looking god on deck. The Hindus won't let the shadow of a Mohammedan fall on their food without going into a spasm, while the Mohammedans are pretty touchy about the Buddhas. The Confucianists stew things that smell like something too long out of the can and the boys from Slam go for boiled fishes' heads. As for us whites we fight it out with the captain's pet cockroaches.

When the first maroon-sailed junk hove into view off the south sea islands we four gloomy whites brightened up and prepared to rush ashore with croaky shouts of "Food men, food." Columbus had nothing on us. Then even before the port doors came out they ran up the double yellow and white. Danger. Keep off. GET RID OF WHITES. The port launch came out with four doctors; one white man, two Malays and a Chinese woman. There was a lot of head shaking and wagging and pointing toward us whites. The skipper was arguing that we were all right. Toss the others into a disease island if you must, but turn us loose because our tickets said that in case of hold-over they had to feed us.

They lined all the deckstays up on the stern washed prow and started putting them through the medical jerks. The Chinese woman, wearing man's clothes and short cropped hair, was bawling the work; and how she did know it. She swanked and swaggered about like a pre-war Russian general.

"Take off that veil," she demanded of a Sikh woman. "But there are men here," the woman argued through her silken folds. "Even infidels," she added, giving me a dirty look.

"Take it off. Make haste. Be smart," the Chinese ordered. She strode up and down the rows of women and babies and bearded brutes from the cool hills. "Put clothes on that baby," she said to one woman whose child wore only a bangle. She kept swinging along the line. "You, too," she snapped to another. "Put clothes on that child. None of your Indian tricks here."

CLOTHES, CLOTHES. "But this is a boy. This is my son." "Put clothes on him. I'm not a doctor," she snapped. She swung around on her heel and came back. Two women were still veiled. She whipped the face coverings away and showed them to be reasonably attractive Sikh women with rubies dangling from their noses. The Sikhs are the biggest and most powerful of the Asiatics, this Chinese one of the smallest, but she certainly made them hop.

With the examination complete, they herded the whole kit and kaboodle of fussy voyagers into mud scows and dragged them off to a distant palm-covered island. Then they came up to look at us four whites. The Chinese woman did things to me that no other human, living or dead, ever did before, but I had to take it and like it, or else go away on the mud barge with the untouchables. Is my face red? Yes, well that's not sunburn. After doing everything except turn us inside out like a glove, the medical board of strategy agreed that we'd probably live through the night. "And now then about that opium," somebody said.

A squad of men in navy blue came swarming up the gangway. They carried sledges, crowbars, searchlights, cyanide gas tanks, claw hammers and battering rams prepared to tear the ship to shreds unless some opium or cocaine was produced from somewhere. There was more official bowing and hulloaloo, but within an hour the raiding squad had withdrawn in triumph, with some packages that seemed to contain opium.

Meantime, the gaudiest collection of sampans, junks, dhows, canoes, skiffs, yawls and common barges seen by eyes gathered around the ship and coolies swarmed aboard to commence dumping rice over the ton.

I found an old wheezer with his boat painted every color he could find, and his outfit a patchwork of gaudy colors topped by a hat the shape of an umbrella. He rowed me through waters swarming with long narrow eels to a rocky shore, set me down, but held my luggage, and then went into a frenzy when I paid him off in rupees.

BACK TO DOLLAR LAND. "Dollar, dollar, dollar," he chanted as he splashed his oars. I remembered then that Malaya and the Straits are on dollar coinage, so I walked up the bank and found a railway station, where they changed the money. This is probably the biggest station on earth which never saw, smelted, heard or housed any train of any kind whatever. The nearest train is fourteen miles away, but it's a dandy station, anyhow.

I went back and gave old Paint on the Boat a half dollar, which is a quarter in our money, and he talked on the subject of dollars indirectly, and his own son directly, to see that my visit to the land of rubber and tin should make me healthy, wealthy and wise.

The son, an athletic-looking chunk of a boy, chartered a caravan of rickshaws, loaded my sea-going gear aboard and barked orders. "Food," I said. "Chinese food. Take me to the best Chinese restaurant in Penang."

"Dum," he shouted. "Bombay duck skin; best in world." "Bombay bolognese. I want steak and mushrooms, with plenty of au jus. Let's go."

"TO MY CLUB." The rickshaw boy who was trotting around with me got ahead of the kit caravan, and when he finally turned around to look they were gone. He set me down in a small, nearly knocked me out of the way by demanding, "And where now, your lordship?"

"Oh," I said, "drive me to the club, James."

I meant the thing as a gag, of course, but the coolie took it all seriously, and we astonished the monowheel-wearing Dutch and British rubber planters by invading their holy of holies on the seafloor with a whole caravan of rickshaws. Ordinarily, rickshaws aren't allowed inside the gates, nor do uninvited guests turn up in greasy shorts and khaki shirts. However, I breezed in so coolly and they put me into the finest bedroom I've seen since leaving New York, and here I am until somebody hands me the bum's rush.

THEOLOGICALS' PARLEY ENDS

Rev. E. F. Church Sees in New Psychology Whereby Preachers Might Do Good

With an address by Rev. E. F. Church, on the subject of "The Preacher's Use of the New Psychology," the Theological Conference, which has been in progress here since Monday, was brought to a conclusion yesterday at noon. Mr. Church dealt with the subject of the mission of the clergy with regard to what is known as functional diseases, which had to do with the nervous system and for which medical men were not able always to prescribe.

There was, he felt, an opportunity in this respect for the preacher. The fundamental truths of mental hygiene should be mastered by clergymen, he stated, and use should be made of this to offer advice to those in need of help. Mental diseases did not mean that the person afflicted was weak-minded. Often those of outstanding ability were afflicted.

There was an opportunity in the case of the sick whereby a minister could be of decided assistance in the aiding of those who were sick. In this way they would be welcomed by the medical men by exerting a cheerful spirit in the invalid. This would be far better than "mumbling a few platitudes."

"Romanticism in Religion" formed the subject of a second address yesterday morning, in which the subject was introduced by Rev. Dr. C. K. Mahoney, of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Yakima. Rev. Dr. E. F. Church, of Seattle, the new president, presided.

DELEGATES TELL OF CONVENTION

Impressions of Rotary International Parley Related to Local Club

At the luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club yesterday, various aspects of the recent convention in Seattle were dealt with by delegates who attended the meeting. Dr. C. K. Mahoney, of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Yakima, said that he got more out of the convention than out of anything that he had attended before in connection with the organization. He felt that he had become a much better Rotarian than he was before. His ideas had been broadened.

Percy Watson declared that Rotarians here had for two weeks been living in an international atmosphere. Conventions, he felt, were necessary. Mr. Watson referred to the wholehearted way in which the Rotary spirit had been taken hold of by the British people. It had spread to all parts of the Empire.

F. Pinfold pointed to the frank way in which were discussed such questions as reparations, war debts and other problems facing the nations of the world. Various aspects of the forward movement by various representatives of the world. It was a duty, said the speaker, to study these questions. Rotary stood for international tolerance.

CHARLES H. FRENCH PRAISED THE preparations for the convention by the people of Seattle. Not only did the Rotary members join in this, but the people of the city as a whole. The character of the people in attendance at the gathering struck him as remarkable. They were of a very high order. The British delegates were given great praise by Mr. French.

What Today Means

"CANCER"

If July 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:15 a.m. from 1:30 to 3:15 p.m. and from 5:30 to 7:15 p.m. Some rather startling happenings are scheduled to occur on July 1. Planetary conjunctions of unusual expected developments that will inure to the benefit of those whose occupations are identified with manufacturing interests. Social contacts, too, will be made of a promising nature. Be on the alert for opportunities from unknown directions.

The child born on this July 1 will be winsome and attractive. The indulgence which it will receive as a result of these characterizations will not spoil its stinging qualities. It will be truthful, sincere and candid. Its intelligence will be average; its common sense exceptional. It is threatened with serious illness just before attaining the age of puberty.

If your birthday is July 1, the Fates have not been stingy with you. Endowed with a good mental equipment, with an unquenchable desire to recognize opportunity, and with a disposition that is adventurous and courageous, you can—if you so will—climb the Mountain of Achievement and reach the top. The one element that is liable to interfere with your upward progress is lack of application and meagreness of concentration.

Destiny singled you out for a controlling position in life. You have all the essential qualities of leadership. If you can so control your susceptibilities as to refuse to allow them to shape your actions, nothing will hold you back. One of the chief dangers to your advancement is the opposite sex. This would not be a cause for worry if it were not for the fact that you are particularly sensitive and always respond to this seductive condition.

You are sparkling and magnetic, and in married life, your partner must learn to expect the unexpected. While versatile, you are erratic, and no one who lives with you will have any great feeling of security. You will be a brilliant companion, but an undependable one. Original in your ideas, you may often be tempted to defy conventionality. A humdrum existence will never appeal to you; violent changes are most desired to one of your temperament.

1867 — DOMINION DAY — 1932

"So in the long hereafter this Canada shall be The worthy heir of British power and British liberty."

—Fidells.

It is both proper and natural upon anniversary occasions to reflect upon the circumstances and causes which accompanied and brought about the event which the anniversary commemorates.

Especially interesting are the names of those who played a leading and decisive part in such an event.

The average newspaper reader, indeed the average schoolboy, is well aware of the date of the first Dominion Day. Nearly every Canadian home possesses in some form or other a copy of the familiar picture of the Fathers of Confederation.

There they sit or stand under the presidency of the "venerable and benign" Tache, in a chamber looking out through arched windows upon the broad expanse of a majestic river. John A. Macdonald stands, erect and jaunty, his right hand holding a paper, the other resting lightly upon a map spread before him on the table.

Beside him is seated his close friend and colleague, George Cartier. On the opposite side of the table sits George Brown, Macdonald's keenest and most formidable political opponent, but a strong advocate of Confederation. To the right is the stout figure of Dr. Charles Tupper, the Nova Scotian. On either side of Tupper are Oliver Mowat and D'Arcy McGee. Other familiar figures are those of Tilly, Langevin, William Macdougall, Adams Archibald and Peter Mitchell.

If the personalities are interesting, so also are their achievements and the conditions under which they did their work. The political struggles of the period had brought to the front a notable group of statesmen. They had been trained in a severe school. The political antagonisms of the time were colored by racial differences of French and English, Irish and Scot. It is well known that the deadly antagonism between Brown and Macdonald was in no small measure due to the imperfect sympathies of Lowland and Highland Scot. Party and race feeling in Canada was never more intense or bitter than just before Confederation, but the fact adds all the more brilliant lustre to the unselfish patriotism and public spirit shown by the statesmen of that strenuous period in joining their forces for the purpose of creating a united country.

For several years it had been extremely difficult to carry on the affairs of Government under the old Act of Union, owing to the closely balanced state of the parties and the narrow parliamentary majorities resulting therefrom. In May, 1864, the Tache-Macdonald Administration was defeated on a want of confidence motion by a majority of two and a new election seemed inevitable. The day following, however, George Brown approached two of the Government's most influential supporters, Morris and Pope, and urged them to see their ministerial friends and make known to them his desire that the present crisis should be turned to the advantage of the country by adopting the Federal principle. He intimated also that he was willing to co-operate in every way.

A conference was at once arranged between Mr. Brown and the members of the Government. A memorandum was prepared in which the Government pledged itself "to bring in a measure next session for the purpose of removing existing difficulties by introducing the Federal principle into Canada . . . and use its best endeavors to secure the assent of those interests which are beyond the control of our own legislation to such a measure as may enable all British North America to be united under a general legislature based upon the Federal principle."

A few days later the course of these negotiations was made known to the House by Macdonald, and Brown announced that he had agreed to enter the Cabinet in order to further the Confederation project. The Coalition Government was formed. At the conferences, first at Charlottetown and later at Quebec, all difficulties were courageously and successfully met, and the British North America Act was passed in due form by the Imperial Parliament.

In the nature of things, Dominion Day has always been something more than a local anniversary. It would be strange indeed if it should ever fail to evoke Imperial aspirations as well. The sentiment in favor of the Imperial connection has ever been part and parcel of our political philosophy. It would be equally strange if we should take a narrow view of this anniversary at the present juncture in Imperial history when Canada holds out welcoming hands to the representatives of all the other British nations who are assembling at Ottawa to consider the economic needs of the whole Empire.

It is notoriously difficult to place a right estimate upon the importance of events that are close to us in time, and there is room for some difference of opinion as to some of the events in our history since Confederation. The expansion of the Dominion, to include Manitoba, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island, and the erection of Saskatchewan and Alberta to the status of provinces, should be mentioned with due emphasis. Before the Great War two events of outstanding importance in their effect on Canadian life had occurred, namely, the adoption of a protective national policy and the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Since then there have been some constitutional changes of note. There will, however, be general agreement that the present year, and the present month of July will witness certain events which are likely to produce even profounder effects in that their influence will extend to every part of the Empire.

Confederation has now lasted sixty-five years of economic as well as of political development. In 1867 large areas of British North America consisted of uninhabited forest and prairie. There were few cities. Agriculture and lumbering were the chief interests. Many of the necessary articles of domestic and personal use were made in the home. Nothing was known of mass production, electric traction, electric light, rapid transit by automobile, telephone, moving pictures, radio or airplane. Canadians of that day were used to muddy roads, surface drainage, wooden sidewalks, a water supply from private wells, coal oil lamps, tallow candles, and in rural districts homespun garments. That was the era, however, in which was forged an instrument of government firmly based on British Constitutional Law, an instrument which has proved its excellence for sixty-five years. The aims and aspirations of the Fathers of Confederation have been amply justified by the logic of events.

REPUDIATING LAND ANNUITIES

Britain is to take steps to collect the Irish Land Annuities because of the announced default by the Irish Free State of the semi-annual payment of £1,500,000 due today. The collection is to be made through the imposition of a duty on Irish goods imported to Britain. The Free State has denounced the payments, but is willing to submit the question to an international tribunal. It has not been the custom to effect settlements of disputes within the British Empire by foreign interposition. Britain has refused the proposal and will take her own steps to collect moneys being withheld by the Government of the Free State.

The Irish Land Annuities developed through a series of Land Acts whereby Irish tenants were empowered to buy their holdings from their landlords. For this purpose the British Government advanced large sums of money through the issue of Irish Land Stock subscribed to by private individuals and corporations in Britain. The annuities cover the interest and redemption of the stock. They are payments on the installment system by the Irish tenant for the land which he bought. These annuities are collected by the Free State Government, which in turn has been in the habit of paying them to the National Debt Commissioners of Britain. In principle, however, the main transaction is not between the two Governments but between the Irish tenant purchaser and the holder of the Land Stock.

The claim made by Mr. de Valera is based on the statement that Northern Ireland retains the Land Annuities accruing in the six Northern counties. That example does not connote a prescription for repudiation. Under the Government of Ireland Act of 1920 both Northern and Southern Ireland were to retain the Land Annuities for their respective territories, "in virtue of paying a contribution to the cost of Imperial services." Northern Ireland retains her annuities and pays her contribution. The Act did not come into force in Southern Ireland. Instead, under the Anglo-Irish Treaty, the Free State agreed to forego the obligation of contributing to the cost of Imperial services, and in a subsequent agreement with the British Government obligated herself to continue to pay the Land Annuities to Britain. That agreement was signed in February, 1923. The annual amount, payable in half-yearly installments, is £3,000,000. The Irish Land Stock is guaranteed by the British Government and the burden of any default would fall on the British taxpayers. This history of the annuities is recounted by Mr. Hugh O'Neill in The Empire Review.

What Britain is now to do is to make good the deficiency, or default, of the Irish Free State by discriminatory tariffs against imports from the Free State. The effect of the repudiation will be to injure seriously the credit of the Free State, and to work deleteriously against her export trade. There was an example within the past year of repudiation within the British Empire when New South Wales ceased payment of interest on loans from Britain. The Commonwealth Government assumed the obligations and made provision to collect from New South Wales. Before long an election was held in New South Wales and the party of repudiation was swept from power. That is an indication that British peoples do not favor repudiation. No doubt the situation arising over the Irish Land Annuities will prove another factor in hastening a new appeal to the people of Southern Ireland. In the meantime, the British Government cannot enter into any new agreements with a Government which has repudiated pacts made by its predecessor in office.

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of a great action is gone, like the bloom from a soiled flower.—Proude.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

What constitutes a state? Men who their duties know, But know their rights, and knowing, dare maintain.

—Jones (Mr. William).

We almost forgot to mention that in this year of big conventions one of the biggest conventions of all is meeting in Chicago. The Democrats of the United States are holding a convention for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the presidency. Political conventions in the United States are curious institutions—at least they appear curious to people who are accustomed to a certain amount of dignity and decorum at meetings called for the purpose of selecting persons to represent them in important public positions.

The candidate nominated by the Democratic convention will in all probability be the next President of the United States, and the Presidency of the United States is one of the most important positions in the world. It might also be one of the most influential positions in the world but for the existence of the United States Congress, which most of the time appears to take delight and satisfaction in circumscribing the powers of the national chief executive. The existing Congress appears to have reduced the powers of the existing president to that infinitesimal point called a nullity.

The constitution of the United States is a peculiar instrument which has been curiously interpreted. To those who are accustomed to simpler political institutions and customs it sometimes seems as if the United States constitutional were designed to thwart the will of Congress and the will of the people who elect Congresses.

The existing Congress, from the point of view of an outsider, appears to have devoted nearly all its time and its energies to opposing the policies of the president. The recent Republican convention was simple and direct in its actions compared with the conduct of the Democratic convention now meeting, talking, resolving and demonstrating in Chicago. The Republican convention deemed that its business was to nominate President Hoover to succeed himself, and it accomplished its task with very little loss of time, considering the time usually taken to nominate a presidential candidate. Which was somewhat remarkable considering that the Republican convention was a great deal "wetter" than the Democratic convention appears to have been thus far—for the newspapers report that there was a big stein in the hand of every Republican delegate when a motion nominating Hoover was carried unanimously. It is reasonable to assume that every stein was fully charged with the stuff which creates enthusiasm.

The spirit of opposition which has been characteristic of the present Congress appears thus far to have characterized the Democratic convention. The Democrats of the United States appear to want Roosevelt, the present state governor of New York, to oppose Hoover, but the Democrats in the convention seem determined to make the nomination of Roosevelt as complicated and difficult a business as repealing the Eighteenth Amendment to the constitution, or anything which seems in accord with popular sentiment. In fact, the business of nominating Roosevelt may not be complicated that Roosevelt may not be nominated at all, that the ultimate nominee may be one of those curious and rare bipeds sometimes called a "dark horse." Such things have been known to occur in United States political conventions, and occasionally the dark horse has proved the faster horse in the race. At any rate, the Democratic delegates to the convention are not going to nominate anybody before they have had what is called at political conventions a "good time," with an abundance of banner waving, rooting, band-playing and ballyhoo. Presidential nominations in that respect are very much like selections of champion prize-fighters, and very often it is not the best runner or fighter who gains the decision.

We notice by the papers that certain Canadians are taking a great deal of interest in and hoping for much from the results achieved by the Democratic convention. The convention has declared that it favors a modification in the United States tariff and freer trade between the nations of the world. But Canadians of experience do not set much store by or place deep faith in the adoption of abstract resolutions. It is one thing for a convention or a candidate to propose and another thing for a Congress to act. The American system of legislation is so complicated that definite action may be delayed or obstructed for years by astute politicians.

ST. MARGARET'S HEARS REPORTS

Prizes for Year's Scholastic and Athletic Work Presented by Canon Nunns

The annual prize-giving at St. Margaret's School was attended by a large number of parents, friends and former pupils of the school, on Wednesday evening, in the gymnasium. Mrs. Spurgin, the headmistress, read a report of the past year's activities, in which she referred to the success of the senior matriculation students, and to the old girls who had won scholarships at Victoria College and the University of British Columbia, Deborah Aish and Patricia Johnson having done outstanding work in their university courses.

Under the tutelage of Miss Bay in the Upper School and Miss Turner in the Lower School, dramatics had made a forward step, and as a result of the Nativty play presented at Christmas time, the sum of $50 was collected for comforts and cheer for needy families.

Chinese Student Is Brilliant Scholar; Promotions Issued

Hing Hope Completes Two-Year Course in One and Ranks First at High School—Wins Trophy—Bursaries Go to Burnside School

THERE were some proud children and some disappointed ones yesterday when school closed, but ameliorating the burden of those who went home without being promoted was the joy of ten weeks' vacation to look forward to.

Many students took home rolls of honor for proficiency, deportment and regularity, but probably the proudest of all students was Hing Hope, aged fifteen, who passed first in second-year high school with the remarkable distinction of having achieved this ranking by completing two years' study in one.

BRILLIANT SCHOLAR

Hing Hope won the Governor-General's medal for the Victoria Inspectorate when he passed his entrance examination at the North Ward School two years ago. He was second highest in the province, losing first position by only four points. He took up a commercial course at high school, but at the end of the first year had shown such progress that the faculty persuaded him to take an academic training and go to university.

Undaunted, he started out at the beginning of the term just concluded to cover the two-year course in one. He did and passed, ranking first with an average of more than ninety-one.

WINS TROPHY

Trustee J. M. Campbell, former principal of North Ward School, found it a great pleasure to officiate at the closing exercises in which Hing Hope was presented with a silver cup in recognition of his brilliant and diligent study. Mr. Campbell taught the boy at North Ward. Mun Hope, brother of Hing Hope, also won a silver trophy at the High School for ranking first among the first-year students.

Closing exercises were held in practically all the city schools. It was an outstanding day for the Burnside School, where bursaries were presented to the students with the highest average marks in Division I work. The presentation was made by Mrs. R. B. McKimling, regent for the Sir James and Lady Douglas Chapter, T.O.D.E., which organization sponsors the bursaries. Those receiving the awards were Ruth McPherson and Henry Henry. Astronomical Society to Conduct Special Sessions

Series of Ten Weekly Summer Meetings at Private Observatory of H. B. Brydon Open to Limited Number of Applicants

Under the auspices of the local council of the Astronomical Society of Canada the experiment of popular summer meetings for the study of the heavens is to be tried this year.

A programme of ten weekly study meetings has been drawn up, the idea being to take a special subject for each evening with one or two special speakers. The first will be held on Tuesday, July 12, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, and meetings will be held every subsequent Tuesday at the same time and place for the subsequent ten weeks. Meetings will be at the home of H. B. Brydon, 2280 Oak Bay Avenue.

Mr. Brydon has one of the best-equipped private observatories in the Dominion, and his telescope will be a great help in the study of the moon, planets and other celestial objects under discussion on that particular evening. As accommodation will be limited, early application must be made for membership in this group. The secretary, Garden 7335, will give any further information required.

FINDING OLD FRIENDS
Many persons are deterred from the fascinating study of old stars because of the time and work involved or because they think it means great mathematical knowledge or expensive instruments. These objections are easy to overcome. Anyone who is really interested enough to devote an hour or two a week to studying the stars first hand will find it easy to acquire an intimate acquaintance with them, with their names, colors, times of appearance, sizes, distances, and many other facts which will be a source of constant delight and increasing interest.

J. A. Livingstone, of Firestone Tire Co., Pleased With Crop Conditions

J. A. LIVINGSTONE

J. A. Livingstone, of Hamilton, advertising manager of the Firestone Tire Company of Canada, who is now in the city, has every confidence that conditions should speedily rectify themselves. With a large crop in view on the Prairies, Mr. Livingstone found conditions very much improved already there.

In addition to this, the Economic Conference which will be held in Ottawa should be of inestimable advantage to Canada.

On his visit to the West Mr. Livingstone motored over a considerable section of the Prairies and saw just the condition in which the grain was. It is such, he says, that the crop of this year should be one of the best the Prairies has had. This cannot fail to revive the commercial situation there.

Mr. Livingstone came here to confer with the local distributors, Mackenzie, White & Dunsmuir, Ltd. He was in the city on this occasion for the purpose of maintaining contact with the company's distributors.

Court of Appeal

Victoria Sittings

Shahwa Singh (R) vs. Surain Singh et al. (A)—In this case respondent had obtained an order in the Supreme Court giving him leave to sign judgment upon appellants failing to file affidavits of documents.

Counsel for appellants contended that the judge had no jurisdiction to make the order at that stage of the proceedings. No previous order had been made for discovery. An order resulting in judgment in the action could only be made after failure to comply with a previous order. It was suggested that the order appealed from was a consent order, consequently leave to appeal had been obtained from the trial judge. Leave had not been given within fifteen days after making of the order appealed from.

The Court of Appeal decided that it was in the interests of justice that the time for appealing should be extended and allowed the appeal.

E. C. Mayers, K.C., for appellant; F. C. Elliott for respondent.

Fraser (A) vs. Radermacher (R)—Respondent had purchased a house and it had been conveyed by vendor to appellant. The title was registered and a certificate of title issued in appellant's name. Subsequently respondent informed appellant that he wished to borrow some money on a mortgage over the house, and asked her to transfer the house to him. She accordingly executed a conveyance of the property and

The idea of the forthcoming series of weekly meetings is to familiarize the members with the constellations and the solar system. Each meeting will be opened with an informal discussion in simple, nontechnical language, after which practice in actual observing will take place.

JUNIOR MEMBERS
In order to make these meetings available to young people, the Victoria centre recently instituted a class of junior members at reduced annual dues, which include the subscription to the journal of the society and to attendance at all the meetings.

The library of the centre will be available for the use of members of the course.

THE MEETINGS
Following is the complete schedule of the summer meetings:

July 12—"The Celestial Sphere"; speaker, James Duff.
July 19—"The Summer Constellations"; speaker, W. E. Harper.
July 26—"System of Co-ordinates"; speaker, H. B. Brydon.
August 2—"The Earth—Its Shape and Size"; speaker, James Duff and J. A. Pearce.
August 9—"The Moon"; speakers, F. Hartley and H. B. Brydon.
August 16—"Solar and Sidereal Time"; speaker, C. St. Beal.
August 23—"Naked Eye Variable Stars"; speaker, F. S. Hogg.
August 30—"Constellation Study" and "Problems on the Celestial Sphere"; speaker, J. A. Pearce.
September 6—"The Planet Saturn"; speaker, H. D. Brydon.
September 13—"Meteoritic Showers"—The Perseids; speaker, James Duff.

authorized respondent to utilize the certificate of title for the purpose of obtaining registration. Respondent did not mortgage the property. Appellant paid taxes and insurance premiums. Respondent applied to register the title. The certificate of title was issued to respondent. Appellant then had the certificate of title in her possession and notice was given to appellant by registered mail that the certificate of title was in her possession and notice was given to appellant by registered mail that the certificate of title was in her possession.

It was alleged by respondent that the property had been conveyed to appellant in trust for himself and that appellant had agreed to pay rent for the use of it.

The court of Appeal reserved judgment.

E. C. Mayers, K.C., for appellant; J. W. deB. Farris, K.C., for respondent.

FRANK PAULDING WELCOMED HERE

Newly Appointed General Secretary of Local Y.M.C.A. Is Introduced to Staff Members

Frank Paulding, newly appointed general secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., has arrived in the city from Vancouver to take over his new office here. He is exchanging houses with Walter S. Maguire, who will shortly leave for New Westminster.

Mr. Paulding was welcomed by the present secretary, who introduced him to the individual members of the staff, including Archie McKinnon, physical instructor; Vivian Shoemaker, boys' work secretary; Miss Peggy Horne and B. Gale.

Mr. Paulding will stay in Victoria until Saturday afternoon, spending his time chiefly in meeting the various men connected with Y.M.C.A. work here, including the members of the local board of directors. At the end of the week he will leave for New Westminster, and introduce him to the duties and men connected with his new charge.

The new local secretary plans returning to Victoria permanently at the beginning of next week and bringing his family with him. Mr. Paulding is a man long experienced in Y.M.C.A. work and his many accomplishments, both along scholastic and athletic lines, should insure his success here.

FINDS TRADE ON INCREASE

Standard Furniture Co. Here Forced to Acquire Larger Business Premises

After twenty years of service to the buying public of Victoria, during which time the company has maintained a steadily growing business, the Standard Furniture Company, now located in the Finch Building, on Yates Street, has found it necessary to secure larger quarters in order to cope with the volume of business now being enjoyed by the company.

In these days an announcement that a business firm is forced to secure greater space is somewhat novel, but considering the service that this company has given to the people of Victoria since its establishment, it is not surprising that its growth has continued in spite of world-wide conditions.

ESTABLISHED IN 1912
The Standard Furniture Company was established in this city in 1912 in a one-story building on Pandora Avenue, later moving to the Sylvester Block, where two floors were required to carry on the business. The rapid increase in business forced another removal to the Finch Building, where four floors were needed. In August the company will go into the Gordon Block, a few doors east of the present location on Yates Street.

The Gordon premises will have a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of 110 feet, and the contract for extensive alterations has been awarded to a local contractor, who will commence work early next week. The Gordon Building is rated among the best business blocks in the city, and has probably the most extensive window display accommodation on Yates Street. The company will require the whole of the building in which to stock and show its many lines of home furnishings.

A. S. Denny, who is the sole proprietor of the Standard Furniture Company, served his apprenticeship in the furniture business in London, England. He also spent several years in Toronto establishing the business. When fully equipped with the necessary knowledge to carry on for himself, Mr. Denny selected Victoria in which to open his first store. He is well known to most of the big furnishing houses in the Dominion, and is considered an expert in the matter of furniture and home decoration.

EXPERIENCED STAFF
The Standard Furniture Company employs no one who is not fully experienced in his branch of the home furnishings business. The present staff has been with Mr. Denny for a number of years and is capable of advising and selecting what is best suited to the modern home.

"We are thoroughly confident that Victoria will be among the first cities in the Dominion to return to normal times, and we are preparing to share in that return of prosperous times. Our business during the past few years has been exceptionally good, considering the times. Our custom has been to stand solidly behind the goods we sell, and when we are located in our new home we will be in a position to offer to Victoria citizens the very best that is available in the line of home furnishings. The spirit of the Standard is the same today as it was twenty years ago," said Mr. Denny.

On Wednesday afternoon at E. W. White's strawberry farm at Keating, following the serving of refreshments, the gathering took part in a programme of sports, featured by a softball game which was won by the Experimental Farm team by a score of 18 to 3. In the hayraking contest, however, the department team retained their defeat with a victory, having three and a half minutes to spare before the time was up. The seed-naming contest was won by Miss Allen, of the farm, with Miss D. Jewkes, of the department, second. The results of the goal-milking contest for juveniles was: 1, Miss M. Plimer; 2, Miss Alma Houston; 3, Master William Newton.

Only a tube that is built in a circle can be inflated evenly in a circle. A "Circle Built" tube does not kink when inflated—the outer circumference is not unduly stretched—the surface under the tire tread is not thinned by stretching—the rubber lasts longer because it is not at maximum tension. Symphony Orchestra Will Give Celebration Concert

Extended Programme Arranged for Sunday Afternoon at Beacon Hill Park—Vocal Soloist Is Secured—Replaces Service of Thanksgiving

Due to arrangements made by the Dominion Day celebration committee, the weekly band concert at Beacon Hill Park on Sunday has been considerably extended; it was announced yesterday by Alderman T. W. C. Hawkins, chairman of the executive.

William F. Tickle, leader of the symphony orchestra, has provided a programme of selections, including four vocal solos. Mrs. Theima Johns will be the soloist and Malcolm H. More will be the accompanist.

One of the outstanding features on the programme is Coward's grand selection, "Cavalcade." The "Cavalcade" has been showing in England for the past two years on the light-imate stage and is now being made into a sound motion picture. The music deals with the favorite tunes, which everyone has sung since the reign of Queen Victoria.

OTHER SELECTIONS

Other selections on the concert programme are: Mendelssohn's "War March of the Priests," Reiser's overture, "The Mill on the Cliff"; German's "Merrie England"; Linck's concert waltz, "Spring, Beautiful Spring"; two solos by Mrs. Johns, "Dawn" (Curran) and "Kil-larney" (Balle); Binding's nautical fantasy, "Life on the Ocean"; two solos by Mrs. Johns, Manauca's "I Love Life" and Lieurance's "By the Waters of Minnetonka"; Meacham's "American Patrol"; Jessel's "Wedding of the Rose" and Langley's Scottish selection, "From the Highlands."

The concert will begin at 2:30 o'clock instead of 3, and will replace the service of Thanksgiving, which was to have been arranged in commemoration of Confederation.

"I am sorry, doctor, you were not able to attend the dinner last night; it would have done you good to be there."

Presents Annual Address

MRS. W. A. Chambers, re-elected by acclamation as president of the Jubilee Hospital Women's Auxiliary at the annual meeting on Wednesday, gave a brief address in which she thanked the members, hospital authorities and the public for their co-operation. The secretary, Miss Margaret Curry, covered the year's activities in a comprehensive report, showing that in addition to the tag day for their funds they had provided Christmas cheer for the nurses, held a linen shower, finished 1,547 pieces of sewing, and purchased many much-needed articles for the hospital. Mrs. Vaughan Roberts' report as treasurer showed that the year began with a balance on hand of $1,606.32, receipts for the year totaling $1,778.88, and expenditures amounting to $2,417. Mrs. J. L. Crimp, convener of the sewing committee, gave a detailed report. No more meetings will be held until September.

NEW MINISTER INDUCTED HERE

Rev. T. H. Nuttall Takes Over Duties at Victoria West United Church

Rev. T. H. Nuttall, formerly pastor of the United Church at Powell River, was formally inducted in the pastorate of the Victoria West United Church last evening. At a social gathering in the schoolroom, following the service, Mr. Nuttall remarked upon the fact that no time had been lost in carrying out the ceremony. He had only reached Victoria an hour or two before being called upon to be introduced to his congregation.

The induction was carried out under the charge of Rev. J. C. Switzer, chairman of the Presbytery of Victoria. Assisting him were Rev. W. R. Brown, of James Bay United, who delivered the address to the new pastor, and Rev. Dr. J. K. Unsworth, who spoke to the congregation.

ADDRESS TO PASTOR
Mr. Brown was glad to learn that in a census on the requirements of a minister, the highest percentage was in favor of a good preacher. He advised the new pastor against centring too strongly upon the work of his own congregation to the disadvantage of other useful works.

Dr. Unsworth recalled the characteristics as set out in the early church. They should realize the ever-present God in the congregation. The second quality required was that of being personally good. It was a specific and definite Christ that must be followed. The third requisite was brotherhood, without which there could be no real progress.

LAUDS GOOD WORK
Mr. Switzer praised the good work done by Mr. and Mrs. Nuttall in Powell River. A solo was sung by George Guy as an anthem by the choir of the church.

Following the benediction being pronounced by Rev. John Robson, the congregation adjourned to the schoolroom, where refreshments were served. On behalf of the Men's Club of the church, J. Burgess extended a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Nuttall, and promised them hearty co-operation.

Mr. Nuttall assured them of his readiness to work for the upbuilding of the cause.

Water Colors Shown By Victoria Artist

Visitors and many residents have shown a great interest in the collection of water color paintings by Arthur H. Parker, a Victoria artist, placed on display in the Elizabethan drawing-room at the Empress Hotel this week. The pictures, all executed in the finished style which is characteristic of Mr. Parker's work, cover a vast field of subject matter, depicting scenes in the Canadian Rockies, on Vancouver Island, about the coast of British Columbia, and in various parts of England and France.

Among the French scenes are some of the spots made famous by the British troops in the late war, including some of the ruined abbeys and other ancient architectural monuments. English people will be familiar with some of the charming scenes about the English countryside. The pictures are to be on view for the entire summer. The collection numbers about 200.

SHE KNEW... One of These Was A Murderer:

MRS. WILLETT...Fluttery, helpless, a society moth who had had her wings singed, but she had a sharp tongue sheathed in her velvety smile...and behind the vapid, chattering exterior clicked a mind as hard and cold as steel!

VIOLET...Everybody loved Violet and Violet loved everybody. Pretty and innocent, sweet and alluring, she seemed to walk always in sunshine...yet there were dark places in her heart where no one had penetrated.

RONNIE...Slightly foolish, he talked too much and knew too little. He couldn't make up his mind whether...it were better to love Violet...or wiser to love Emily. Their fiancés made up his mind for him.

MAJOR BURNABY...A retired army captain, with all the traditional mental frills. He didn't carry a chip on his shoulder...but he had a sign... "High Explosives... Handle With Care"...Gruff, brusque, not an enemy in the world, but a quirk in his brain, he couldn't summon up a tear when his best friend was found murdered.

MR. DUKE...The snobs thought he had been "in trade." The clever ones thought it best not to find out. A certain cold affability marked him off from his fellows...and while everybody knew Mr. Duke...all they knew was what he looked like.

RYCROFT...Amateur criminologist, amateur investigator into psychic phenomena...his library was stacked with books on crime. From his appearance, one judged...he would not hurt a fly. Yet how many had made the step from the study of crime to its practice.

Delta Gammas Dine In Realistic Setting Of Forest Grandeur

Empress Hotel Ballroom Transformed Into Lovely Woodland Glen—Waterfalls, Lakes and Dark Firs Lend Typical B.C. Atmosphere

NEVER before has a banquet been held in the Empress Hotel ballroom amid such scenes of woodland loveliness as that which last night brought to a close the week's festivities of the Delta Gamma convention, and delegates and members from the South and Eastern States will carry with them a lasting memory of British Columbia's typical scenic beauty.

The ballroom had been transformed into an almost unbelievable forest glade. The walls were obscured behind a fringe of firs and cedars, a fern-banked stream flowed from a lake at the east end, into which tumbled a cool waterfall from a rocky crag which towered above. As a background a cleverly-painted scene of snow-capped mountains reflected the soft glow of shaded lights, and the whole effect was one of great beauty.

CLEVERLY EXECUTED

It has been more than a year since the idea of the British Columbia forest banquet was conceived, and for months plans have been in progress under the capable leadership of Mrs. Douglas Roe, of Vancouver. Mr. James Osborne, expert stage artist, long associated with the Vancouver and Empire Theatres, assisted by James Barr, built and set in place the scenic effects, and nearly 100 fir trees from the slopes of the Malahat were brought in to decorate the "glen." The lake, 16 x 24 feet in extent, was retained by heavy water-resistant canvas, and the water for the cascade was piped from the conservatory, and after being corralled in a "sump," an outlet carried it back to its point of origin.

HISTORIC SCENES

Nearly 300 Delta Gammas in their fashionable and very lovely evening frocks entered the ballroom over a quaint rustic bridge to take their places at the long tables, which were decorated with beautiful red roses. Each table bore the model of a scene from which symbolized some epoch in the history and development of the province, from early Indian days, through the covered wagon period, the Spanish discoveries and the establishing of Port Camosun. The models were ingeniously and most beautifully constructed, no detail being omitted from the gold braids of the Northwest Mounted Police uniforms to the piles of fur skins brought by the traders. The old model of a Spanish ship was one of the outstanding exhibits and was a valuable asset in lending "atmosphere" to the scene.

The men cards were particularly attractive, the cover design being the work of Mrs. Roe, and the subjects dealt with British Columbia scenery or historic incidents. The menu itself was quite unimpeachable to any but the Delta Gammas themselves, for the various courses bore Indian names. The drink and policy prevailed, and the appearance of two maidens in Indian dress.

An Empire Day service is held each year, at which the Union Jack is carried by the standard bearer. A report of the proceeds of Alexandra Rose Day was given by the convener, and the treasurer and secretary read interesting reports. The educational secretary reported a visit to the Chinese school, and the child welfare convener read a report of the pictures shown at the Memorial Hall.

PARKING PLACE

It was announced that the Commodore Broughton Chapter will open a parking place on Broughton Street, near the corner of Gordon Street, and the proceeds will go towards the chapter's fund. The Municipal Chapter is assisting with the education of a little deaf and dumb boy, who is obliged to have private tuition, and his progress was reported as most satisfactory.

Mrs. Genge announced that the next meeting will be held in September. An antique desk, presented by Mrs. Genge, was won in a contest by Mrs. F. H. Mayhew.

ELISSA LANDI IN EMPIRE FEATURE

Fine Cast of "Devil's Lottery," Opening Today, Also Includes Victor McLaglen

Elissa Landi, who scored so successfully in "The Yellow Ticket," is said to win new laurels in "Devil's Lottery," the Fox production, opening today at the Empire Theatre. Based on Nabro Bartley's widely-read novel of the same name, "Devil's Lottery" depicts the adventures of a group of people who become suddenly rich as winners of the major prizes in the Calcutta Sweepstakes, the world's biggest gamble, following their meeting at the castle of a member of the nobility who owns the horse that won the English Derby, the result of which decides the "sweep."

Besides Miss Landi, the cast includes such screen celebrities as Victor McLaglen, Alexander Kirkland, Paul Cavanagh, Beryl Mercer, Ralph Morgan, Barbara Weeks and Herbert Mundin. The picture was directed by Samuel Taylor.

ROMANO Harry Langdon and Elissa Landi in "The Yellow Ticket," a comedy, "See America This Year," had never met until they were introduced to each other at Santa Paula, Cal., where the company was "on location." Since then they have become inseparable companions, and are to be featured in a second Universal feature, "See America This Year," a satire on gang warfare in America, in the feature attraction at the Romano Theatre.

COLUMBIA Tom Mix is not the only star in Universal's "Rider of Death Valley," now at the Columbia Theatre. The picture, which has won numerous prizes for her beautiful steeled, Red and Tony, for once was forced to share the spotlight at the Universal City studios. Fred Kohler, Forrest Stanley and Mae Busch are also in the picture's cast.

DOMINION "Letty Lynton" with Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in the principal roles, is the current attraction at the Dominion Theatre. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational film of the Marie Belloc Lowndes novel is an intriguing drama of modern morals with a vivid climax in which the heroine is faced with the choice of loss of reputation or prison. Clarence Brown, who last directed Miss Crawford in "Possessed," screened this new romance of South America and New York.

PLAYHOUSE The inimitable Ben Theatre "Turpin is seen as a cock-eyed aviator in the bombing scenes of Radio Pictures' 'Cracked Nuts,' featuring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. His aim, however, is only as good as his eyes and the bombs fall everything but the object aimed at, which in this case is Woolsey. Dorothy Lee and Edna May Oliver also appear in this comedy, 'Cracked Nuts' is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre.

CAPITOL Boris Karloff follows in his recent triumph in "Frankenstein" with a sinister delineation in another film of the "shock" variety, "Behind the Mask," a Columbia picture, now showing at the Capitol Theatre. This picture is described as a thrilling mystery of a fiendish, dreaded figure, who practised unbelievable cruelties on those who opposed him; he is responsible for a literal reign of terror. As soon as anyone attempts to interfere with his diabolical operations, that person is destroyed in a horrible, inhuman manner. In addition to Karloff, Jack Holt and Constance Cummings play leading roles.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

COMBINATION OF FOODS
You may wonder sometimes why there are so many food faddists, men and women who have worked out a diet that they feel will cure all the ills in the world.

To be quite fair in this matter, it must be admitted that food is important; in fact, it is really the most important thing in life. Without food there would be no life. Also it must be admitted that many of the food habits of today are wrong, not so much in the matter of the quality of the foods eaten, but mostly because of eating more than is necessary, eating between meals, eating meals too close together, eating when not hungry, eating when tired or upset.

However, what food faddists talk about is right combinations of foods, that a certain food must not be eaten with another certain kind or indigestion will result. Drs. John H. Childrey, Walter C. Alvarez and Frank C. Mann, Mayo Clinic, tell us that certain food faddists claim that in prescribing diet for the sick the essential point is to secure right combinations of food and to avoid wrong ones; but that while this sounds reasonable there has not been much scientific evidence to favor this theory or help in knowing what combinations are good.

However, there isn't any question but that certain foods are more easily digested if eaten alone than if eaten with other foods. There is no question either but that some foods are better digested, give up more of their food properties, if eaten with some other food; for instance, a cereal without milk does not give up as much of its food value to the body as when taken with milk. Also it is even more surprising to see that two almost completely indigestible substances such as raw egg and raw starch are well handled when taken together. What can we learn from this?

That food faddists are not all wrong in their suggestions, nor are all their suggestions always right in regard to the average man and woman.

A food may be very slow in digesting in certain individuals, may still be under process of digestion when another meal is eaten. If indigestion follows, the food last eaten is blamed, although it was the previous meal that was really at fault in their particular case. In other words, if we give the matter any thought whatever, we soon learn the food combinations that seem to agree with us, or upset us, and can eat accordingly.

At Aldershot Tattoo Rehearsal

TAKING a keen interest in the year's most brilliant military spectacle, the annual Aldershot tattoo, staged at the Rushmore Arena, Aldershot, England, the Duchess of York and her daughter, Princess Elizabeth, are shown watching a daylight rehearsal of the impressive martial display depicting the history of the British army. The presentation of the historical pageant took place at night, illuminated by huge searchlights.

VICTORIA MAY BE AIRPORT

Robert Davis, of New York, Sees Great Possibilities in Pacific Trade

"In five years' time they will be dropping people in Shanghai from this side of the Pacific by the air route," is the prophecy which Robert Davis, of the New York Sun, makes with regard to the progress of airplane navigation.

"Victoria will probably be one of the greatest airports in the world," he added, as he visualized the traffic which he expects to see passing across the Pacific from the American continent to the Orient. "The flying age is coming," he says. "It will be with us overnight one of these days."

Mr. and Mrs. Davis have just returned from a week spent touring Vancouver Island in company with Mr. and Mrs. George I. Warren. Mr. Davis became most enthusiastic with regard to this island as he began to speak of its attractions.

"Imagine a place where you can go out and catch a fish in any month of the year," he said. "There is nowhere else in the world that I know of where this can be done."

CHANGE IS NEAR

Mr. Davis has no fears with regard to the future of the world. The time is fast coming, he thinks, when conditions will be very materially altered. The recuperative power of this city to take advantage of what he possessed in this line. The equitable climate with a temperature the year round that should appeal to anyone all contributed to this.

On the trip up the Island Mr. Davis had the advantage of spending considerable time with General Noyes, of Qualicum, in fishing expeditions among the streams which the general knows so well. Mr. Davis regards his host on these excursions as one of the best fishermen with whom he ever had the pleasure of spending an outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis will spend a few more days here and about the Island before leaving on his task which keeps him ever on the wing.

Did you hear about the tourist who dropped into a village store and asked for a toothbrush? "Sorry, sir," said the storekeeper. "We haven't got in our stock of Summer novelties yet."

TRADE REVIVAL

As Mr. Davis drew a picture of the future he presented a busy Pacific Ocean. With the traffic which would be carried on the boom of that great ocean he could see the possibility of a busy gateway which might well be Victoria. "The strategic position of this port pointed to the possibility of this, and his advice would be for the people of this city to take advantage of what he possessed in this line. The equitable climate with a temperature the year round that should appeal to anyone all contributed to this.

LONG RESIDENT HERE

Mr. Ditchburn, a resident of Victoria for the past forty years, has been with the Federal Department for more than twenty-two years. He is a former employee of The Colonist.

In May, 1910, Mr. Ditchburn was first appointed as Indian inspector in Victoria. In 1917, he was promoted to chief inspector and in 1923 his ability was further recognized and he was made provincial commissioner.

His keen interest in the work and the department has won him a wide circle of friends and admirers. He is well-known in Victoria, and in lacrosse circles in the city.

EXPRESSES THANKS

The presentation to Mr. Ditchburn came as a most pleasant surprise, and in expressing his thanks he acknowledged the gifts and tendered his appreciation to members of the staff for their co-operation during his lengthy term of office. While he would not directly connect with the department, he would always take an active interest in Indian affairs, he stated.

The manuscript, which accompanied the presentation, was signed by members of the Victoria staff and provincial agencies, and read as follows:

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

"The staff of the Victoria Indian office and the agency officials desire to record our tribute of good will and respect to the occasion of your retirement from the department after long and meritorious service."

"In asking your kind acceptance of the accompanying small gift, we trust that you will be spared many years in which to enjoy the respite from official toil and responsibility which we feel you so justly deserve."

"Our most sincere good wishes for health and every other blessing are extended to you and yours as a parting sentiment of homage and good cheer."

INDIAN HEAD IS HONORED

W. E. Ditchburn Retires From Service—Staff Members Make Presentation

At his own request W. E. Ditchburn, Indian commissioner for British Columbia, was retired yesterday and was honored on the occasion by a most pleasing presentation from members of his staff throughout the province. The gifts, a gold wrist-watch and an initialed silver cigar case, were presented by Charles C. Perry, assistant commissioner, on behalf of the staff, who expressed sincere good wishes for Mr. Ditchburn's welfare in the future.

On the reverse side of the watch was the following inscription: "Presented to Commissioner W. E. Ditchburn by the staff of the Indian Affairs in British Columbia on his retirement June 30, 1932."

DOMINION DAY EVENTS VARIED

Rodeo, Baseball, Track Meet and Regatta Few of Attractions Offered

A motor cycle rodeo, packed with thrills; Tiger Singh, East Indian strong man, who will give his weird fiery club exhibition, and a track and field meet, are slated for the Royal Athletic Park at 2 o'clock this afternoon in connection with the Dominion Day celebration.

This event, coupled with the regatta at Elk Lake, are the two outstanding features on today's programme, which will open this morning at 10 o'clock with a baseball game at the Royal Athletic Park, and this will be followed by a dance at the Crystal Garden, commencing at 9 o'clock.

Many events also have been arranged for Saturday and Sunday, while on Monday the Junior Chamber of Commerce will bring the programme to a close with a spectacular air pageant.

Rev. E. A. Henry, B.A., D.D., Warmly Welcomed by Fairfield United Congregation

In the presence of a big congregation, Rev. E. A. Henry, B.A., D.D., was last night inducted as pastor of the Fairfield United Church, succeeding the retiring minister, Rev. Hugh Nixon.

Rev. James Hood, of Belmont United Church, presided and performed the induction. The addresses to the minister and the congregation, respectively, were given by Rev. W. G. Wilson, D.D., pastor of First United Church, and Rev. E. F. Church, pastor of Metropolitan United Church. The former congratulated Dr. Henry on his past record and wide experience in the ministerial work in Canada. He commended the new pastor to the congregation of Fairfield United Church, and reminded the people that they should make his work as easy as possible and not demand too much. Mr. Church, addressing the congregation particularly, indicated the nature of their responsibilities and stressed the importance of putting their force behind the minister.

NOTED CAREER

The citation of Dr. Henry's career noted that he had built St. Paul's Church, Brandon, after taking over there in 1885. This was his first church. From there he went to Knox Church, Hamilton, which was also playing it at the Bournemouth Pavilion, and the music has had a run at the Trocadero. Yvette Darnac, who represents France on the B.C. gave popularity to "Dark-Haired Marie."

BORN IN VICTORIA
Born and educated in Victoria, the composer was known here well as Alma V. Clark, a gifted young pianist who went abroad to study music while she was still in her teens.

Her career as a composer commenced only last year, and now Ambrose and his band, one of the most celebrated bands in London, is playing her light waltz-song, "You Brought My Heart the Sunshine," at the Mayfair Hotel. (This song made its debut on the night of a ball attended by the court debutantes.) Sir Dan Godfrey's band is also playing it at the Bournemouth Pavilion, and the music has had a run at the Trocadero. Yvette Darnac, who represents France on the B.C. gave popularity to "Dark-Haired Marie."

UNEMPLOYMENT FUND CREATED

Provinces Move to Provide for May and June Relief Accounts

By order-in-council yesterday the Provincial Government set up a fund of $500,000, out of which to pay unemployment relief costs since April, both on its own and on Dominion account of direct relief costs already incurred, or to be incurred. Authority was taken under the British Columbia Loan Act, 1922.

Hon. J. W. Jones explained that the sum was earmarked for the payment of May and June direct relief accounts of the Province, and also for advances to be made by the Province on behalf of the Dominion's share of these costs, later to be recovered.

Another order placed $100,000 at the disposal of the Department of Lands for unemployment relief purposes, in connection with forest protection.

Approximately $425,695 of the $1,500,000 sterling loan placed in London this Spring has been utilized under various authorizations of expenditure passed in connection with unemployment relief. Treasury bills at the bank are picked up as occasion offers. Approximately $600,000 in treasury bills will be retired at the end of this month.

Selling Wave at New York Mart Reduces Prices

NEW YORK, June 30.—The stock market's old complaint—liquidation in special issues—returned today, and early gains, impelled by a lower Bank of England discount rate and the Democrats' repeal plank, were more than cancelled.

A few shares which appealed to the speculative imaginations as a result of the anti-prohibition decision at Chicago, rallied from a fraction to about two points in the first half-hour, tugging the general list after them. But there was a little enthusiasm behind this move, and when selling developed in Dow Jones, National Electric, Union Pacific, Procter & Gamble and Air Reduction, resistance proved rather slender all around.

Losses by stocks just enumerated ran from one to more than three points. General Motors was soggy and in new low ground, although its decline was small. U.S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Case, North American, Santa Fe, New York Central and General Electric averaged scarcely half a point.

Thinly traded, Homestake Mining dropped nearly 6 American Tobacco "B" Drug, International Shoe and Borden were off a point or more. National Distillers, Owens Glass and Crown Cork faded quickly as soon as interest in that specialized group began to wane.

Transactions totaled only $44,995,000.

The bond market barely held steady today, despite some mildly constructive developments in both the European and domestic sectors. Sales totaled only $8,785,000.

The United States Government bill came back substantially after the linking spell of the previous session, holding net gains ranging from fractions to around half a point. German obligations, which rallied in the neighborhood of two points on somewhat better news from Lausanne.

WHEAT DROPS FRACTIONALLY

Trading Fairly Active at Winnipeg—Price Range Is Narrow

WINNIPEG, June 30 (CP).—The wheat market was fairly active here today, but prices held to a range of less than a cent and closed fractionally lower. Trading was mostly made up of local spreading.

July was 3-8 lower at 53-1/2; October 3-8 down at 56 to 56-1/2; and December off 1-8 to 1-4 at 57-1/2 to 57-5/8.

There was good support available for July, in part a reflection of these days, was attained when the sugar at 30, up 1-2. The price represents the level at which the stock is to be absorbed into a new company, General Sugar Refineries.

Some weak spots developed, including Canadian Wire & Cable "B" down 7-8 at 4, a new low, and St. Lawrence Paper preferred, down 3-8 to 1 3-8, also a new low.

The banking group was irregular, Montreal gaining 1-2 to 1 1/2, and Canadian National dropping 1-2 to 1 1/2.

THE MURDER at HAZELMOOR

by AGATHA CHRISTIE

CHAPTER I

Major Burnaby drew on his gum boots, buttoned his overcoat collar round his neck, took from a shelf near the door a hurricane lantern, and cautiously opened the door of his little bungalow and peered out.

"The scene that met his eyes was typical of the English countryside as depicted on Christmas cards and in old-fashioned melodramas. Everywhere was snow, deep drifts of it—no mere powdering of a inch or two thick. Snow had fallen all over England for the last four days, and up here on the fringe of Dartmoor it had attained a depth of several feet. All over England householders were groaning over burst pipes, and to have a plumber friend (or even a plumber's helper) was the most coveted of all distinctions."

Up here, in the tiny village of Sittaford, at all times remote from the world, and now almost completely cut off, the rigors of winter were a very real problem.

Major Burnaby, however, was a hardy soul. He snorted twice, he grunted once, and marched resolutely out into the snow.

His destination was not far away. A few paces along a winding lane, then in at a gate, and so up a drive partially swept clear of snow to a house of some considerable size built of granite.

The door was opened by a neatly clad parlourmaid. The major was dismayed at his overcoat, his overshoes and his aged scarf.

A door was flung open and he passed through it into a room which conveyed all the illusion of a transformation scene.

Although it was only half-past three the curtains had been drawn, the electric lights were on and a huge fire blazed cheerfully in the hearth. Two women in afternoon frocks rose to greet the staunch old warrior.

"Splendid of you to turn out, Major Burnaby," said the elder of the two.

"Not at all, Mrs. Willett, not at all. Very good of you to ask me. He shook hands with them both.

"Mr. Garfield is coming," went on Mrs. Willett, "and Mr. Duke, and Mr. Ryecroft."

But one can hardly expect him, his age in such weather. Really, it is too dreadful. One feels one must do something to keep oneself cheerful. Violet, put another log on the fire."

The major rose gallantly to perform this task.

"Allow me, Miss Violet."

He put the log expertly in the right place and returned once more to the armchair his hostess had indicated. Trying to appear as though he were doing so, he cast surreptitious glances round the room. Amazing how a couple of women could alter the whole character of a room—and without doing anything very outstanding that you could put your finger on.

Sittaford House had been built ten years ago by Captain Joseph Trevelyan, R.N., on the occasion of his retirement from the navy. He was a man of substance, and he had always had a great hankering to live on Dartmoor. He had chosen the site of the tiny hamlet of Sittaford. It was not in a valley like most of the villages and farms, but perched right on the shoulder of the moor under the shadow of Sittaford Beacon. He had purchased a large tract of land, had built a comfortable home with its own electric light plant and an electric pump to save labor in pumping water. Then, as a speculation, he had built six small bungalows, each in its quarter acre of ground, along the lane.

The first of these, the one at his very gates, had been allotted to his old friend and crony, John Burnaby—the others had by degrees been sold, there being still a few people who from choice or necessity like to live right out of the world. The village itself consisted of three picturesque but dilapidated cottages, a forge, and a combined postoffice and sweet shop. The nearest town was Exhampston, six miles away, a steady descent which necessitated the sign "Motorists engage your lowest gear," so familiar on the Dartmoor roads. Captain Trevelyan, as he had been said, was a man of substance. In spite of this—or perhaps because of it—he was a man who was inordinately fond of money. At the end of October a house-agent in Exhampston wrote to him asking if he would consider letting Sittaford House. A tenant had made inquiries concerning it, wishing to rent it for the winter.

Captain Trevelyan's first impulse was to refuse, his second to demand further information. The tenant in question proved to be a Mrs. Willett, a widow with one daughter. She had recently arrived from South Africa and wanted house on Dartmoor for the winter.

"Damn it all, the women must be mad," said Captain Trevelyan. "Eh, did you say that?"

Burnaby did think so, and said so as forcibly as his friend had done. He said, "Let the fool woman go somewhere else if she wants to freeze. Coming from South Africa, that's her business."

But at this point Captain Trevelyan's money complex asserted itself. Not once in a hundred times would you get a chance of letting your house in midwinter. He demanded what rent the tenant was willing to pay.

An offer of twelve guineas a week clinched matters. Captain Trevelyan went into Exhampston, rented a small house on the outskirts at two guineas a week, and handed over Sittaford House to Mrs. Willett, half the rent to be paid in advance.

"A fool and her money are soon parted," he growled.

But Burnaby was thinking this afternoon, as he scanned Mrs. Willett covertly, that she did not look a fool. She was a tall woman with a rakish smile, but her physiognomy showed a rather than a foolishness. She was inclined to over-dress, had a distinct colonial accent, and seemed perfectly content with the transaction. She was clearly very well off, and that, as Burnaby had reflected more than once, really made the whole affair more odd. She was not the kind of woman one would credit with a passion for solitude.

As a neighbor she had proved almost embarrassingly friendly. In addition to Sittaford House were rained on everybody. Captain Trevelyan was constantly urged to "Treat the house as though we hadn't rented it," Trevelyan, however, was not fond of women. Report went that he had been jilted in his youth. He persistently refused all invitations.

Two months had passed since the installation of the Willetts, and the first wonder at their arrival had passed away.

Burnaby, naturally a silent man, continued to study his hostess, oblivious to any need for small talk. He liked to make himself out a fool, but wasn't really. So he summed up the situation. His glance shifted to Violet. Pretty girl—scrubby, of course—they all were nowadays. What was the good of a woman if she didn't look like a woman? Papers said curves were coming back. About time, too.

He roused himself to the necessity of conversation.

"We were afraid at first that you wouldn't be able to come," said Mrs. Willett. "You said so, you remember. We were so pleased when you said that after all you would."

"Friday," said Major, with an air of being explicit.

Mrs. Willett looked puzzled.

"Every Friday go to Trevelyan's. Tuesday he comes to me. Both of us do it for years."

"Oh! I see. Of course, living so near."

"Kind of habit."

"But do you still keep it up? I mean now that he is living in Exhampston?"

"Pity to break a habit," said Major Burnaby. "We'd both of us miss those evenings."

"You go in for competitions, don't you?"

"No, I don't. At least not the usual ones. I do crosswords. Trevelyan does too. I won three books last month in a crossword competition," he volunteered.

"Oh! really. How nice. Were they interesting books?"

"Don't know. Haven't read them. Looked pretty hopeless."

"It's the winning that matters, isn't it?" said Mrs. Willett, vaguely.

"How do you get to Exhampston?" asked Violet. "You haven't got a car."

"Walk."

"Not really? Six miles. Good exercise. What's twelve miles. Keeps a man fit. Great thing to be fit."

"Fancy! Twelve miles. But both you and Captain Trevelyan were great athletes, weren't you?"

"Used to go to Switzerland together. Winter sports in winter. Climbing in summer. Wonderful man on ice, Trevelyan. Both too old for that sort of thing nowadays."

"You won the army racquets championship, too, didn't you?" asked Violet.

The major blushed like a girl.

"Who told you that?" he mumbled.

"Captain Trevelyan."

"Joe should hold his tongue," said Burnaby. "He talks too much. What's the weather like now?"

Respecting his embarrassment, Violet followed him to the window. They drew the curtains aside and

More snow coming, said Burnaby.

Major Burnaby drew on his gum boots, buttoned his overcoat collar round his neck, took from a shelf near the door a hurricane lantern, and cautiously opened the door of his little bungalow and peered out.

Snow had fallen all over England for the last four days, and up here on the fringe of Dartmoor it had attained a depth of several feet. All over England householders were groaning over burst pipes, and to have a plumber friend (or even a plumber's helper) was the most coveted of all distinctions."

Up here, in the tiny village of Sittaford, at all times remote from the world, and now almost completely cut off, the rigors of winter were a very real problem.

Major Burnaby, however, was a hardy soul. He snorted twice, he grunted once, and marched resolutely out into the snow.

His destination was not far away. A few paces along a winding lane, then in at a gate, and so up a drive partially swept clear of snow to a house of some considerable size built of granite.

The door was opened by a neatly clad parlourmaid. The major was dismayed at his overcoat, his overshoes and his aged scarf.

aby. A pretty heavy fall, too, I should say."

"Oh, how thrilling!" said Violet. "I do think snow is so romantic. I've never seen it before."

"It isn't romantic when the pipes freeze, you foolish child," said her mother.

"Have you lived all your life in South Africa, Miss Willett?" asked Major Burnaby.

Some of the girl's animation dropped away from her. She seemed almost constrained in her manner as she answered.

"Yes, this is the first time I've ever been away. It's all most frightfully thrilling."

Thrilling to be shut away like this in a remote moorland village. Funny idea. He couldn't get the hang of these people.

The door opened and the parlourmaid announced:

"Mr. Ryecroft and Mr. Garfield. There entered a little, elderly dried-up man and a fresh-colored, boyish young man. The latter spoke first.

"I brought him along, Mrs. Willett. Said I wouldn't let him be buried in a snowdrift. Ha, ha! I say, this all looks simply marvelous. Yule logs burning!"

"As he says, my young friend very kindly piloted me here," said Mr. Ryecroft as he shook hands somewhat ceremoniously. "How do you do, Miss Violet? Very reasonable weather—rather too seasonable, I fear."

He moved to the fire, talking to Mrs. Willett. Ronald Garfield, buttoned Violet.

"I say, can't we get up any skating anywhere? Aren't there some ponds about?"

"I think path digging will be your only sport."

"I've been at it all the morning." "Oh! you're a man!"

"Don't laugh at me. I've got blisters all over my hands."

"How's your aunt?"

"Oh! She's always the same—sometimes she says she's better and sometimes she says she's worse; but I think it's all the same really. It's a ghastly life, you know. Each year, I wonder how I can stick it—there it is—it one doesn't really round the old bird for Christmas—why, she's quite capable of leaving her money to a cat's home. She's got five of them, you know. I'm always stroking the brutes and pretending I dole upon them."

"Mr. Duke," announced the parlourmaid.

Mr. Duke was a recent arrival. He had bought the last of the six bungalows in September. He was a big man, very quiet and devoted to gardening. Mr. Ryecroft, who was an enthusiast on birds, and who lived next door to him, had taken him up.

There Was a Pause. No One Knew What to Ask Next. Then the Table Started Rocking Again. Rhythmically and Slowly, Ronnie Spelled Out the Letters A-Z . . . M-U-R-D-E-R . . .

Major Burnaby pushed back his chair, went to the window and pulled aside the curtain. He stood there looking out with his back to the room.

"Twenty-five minutes past five," said Mr. Ryecroft, glancing up at the clock. He compared it with his own watch and somehow everyone felt that the action was significant in some way.

"Let me see," said Mrs. Willett with forced cheerfulness. "I think we'd better have cocktails."

The situation grew a little easier. "Well," said Ronnie, raising his glass, "here's home."

The others responded—all but the silent figure by the window.

"Major Burnaby. Here's your cocktail."

The major roused himself with a start. He turned slowly.

"Thank you, Mrs. Willett. Not for me. He looked once more out into the night, then came slowly back to the group by the fire. "Many thanks for a very pleasant time. Good night."

"You're not going?"

"Sorry, Mrs. Willett—but it's out to be done. If there were only a telephone."

"Yes—to tell you the truth—I'm well, I'd like to be sure that Joe Trevelyan's all right. Silly superstition and all that—but there it is. Naturally, I don't believe in this tommyrot—but—"

"But you can't telephone from anywhere. There's not such a thing in Sittaford."

"That's just it. As I can't telephone, I'll have to go."

"Go—but you couldn't get a car down the road! Elmer wouldn't take his car out on such a night."

Elmer was the proprietor of the sole car in the place, an aged Ford, hired at a handsome price by those who wished to go into Exhampston.

"No, no—car's out of the question. My two legs will take me there, Mrs. Willett."

There was a chorus of protest. "Oh! Major Burnaby—it's impossible. You said yourself it was going to snow."

"Not for an hour—perhaps longer. I'll get there, never fear."

Argument and entreaty had no more effect on Major Burnaby. He was an obstinate man. Once his mind was made up on any point, no power on earth could move him.

He had determined to walk to Exhampston and see for himself that it was well with his old friend. He wrapped himself up in his overcoat, stepped out into the night.

"I'll just drop into my place for a flask," he said cheerily, "and then push straight on. Trevelyan will put me up for the night when I get there. Ridiculous 'fuss. I know everything sure to be all right. Don't worry, Mrs. Willett. Snow or no snow—I'll get there in a couple of hours. Good night."

He strode away. The others returned to the fire.

Major Burnaby drew on his gum boots, buttoned his overcoat collar round his neck, took from a shelf near the door a hurricane lantern, and cautiously opened the door of his little bungalow and peered out.

"The scene that met his eyes was typical of the English countryside as depicted on Christmas cards and in old-fashioned melodramas. Everywhere was snow, deep drifts of it—no mere powdering of a inch or two thick. Snow had fallen all over England for the last four days, and up here on the fringe of Dartmoor it had attained a depth of several feet. All over England householders were groaning over burst pipes, and to have a plumber friend (or even a plumber's helper) was the most coveted of all distinctions."

Up here, in the tiny village of Sittaford, at all times remote from the world, and now almost completely cut off, the rigors of winter were a very real problem.

Major Burnaby, however, was a hardy soul. He snorted twice, he grunted once, and marched resolutely out into the snow.

His destination was not far away. A few paces along a winding lane, then in at a gate, and so up a drive partially swept clear of snow to a house of some considerable size built of granite.

The door was opened by a neatly clad parlourmaid. The major was dismayed at his overcoat, his overshoes and his aged scarf.

A door was flung open and he passed through it into a room which conveyed all the illusion of a transformation scene.

Although it was only half-past three the curtains had been drawn, the electric lights were on and a huge fire blazed cheerfully in the hearth. Two women in afternoon frocks rose to greet the staunch old warrior.

"Splendid of you to turn out, Major Burnaby," said the elder of the two.

"Not at all, Mrs. Willett, not at all. Very good of you to ask me. He shook hands with them both.

"Mr. Garfield is coming," went on Mrs. Willett, "and Mr. Duke, and Mr. Ryecroft."

But one can hardly expect him, his age in such weather. Really, it is too dreadful. One feels one must do something to keep oneself cheerful. Violet, put another log on the fire."

The major rose gallantly to perform this task.

"Allow me, Miss Violet."

He put the log expertly in the right place and returned once more to the armchair his hostess had indicated. Trying to appear as though he were doing so, he cast surreptitious glances round the room. Amazing how a couple of women could alter the whole character of a room—and without doing anything very outstanding that you could put your finger on.

Sittaford House had been built ten years ago by Captain Joseph Trevelyan, R.N., on the occasion of his retirement from the navy. He was a man of substance, and he had always had a great hankering to live on Dartmoor. He had chosen the site of the tiny hamlet of Sittaford. It was not in a valley like most of the villages and farms, but perched right on the shoulder of the moor under the shadow of Sittaford Beacon. He had purchased a large tract of land, had built a comfortable home with its own electric light plant and an electric pump to save labor in pumping water. Then, as a speculation, he had built six small bungalows, each in its quarter acre of ground, along the lane.

The first of these, the one at his very gates, had been allotted to his old friend and crony, John Burnaby—the others had by degrees been sold, there being still a few people who from choice or necessity like to live right out of the world. The village itself consisted of three picturesque but dilapidated cottages, a forge, and a combined postoffice and sweet shop. The nearest town was Exhampston, six miles away, a steady descent which necessitated the sign "Motorists engage your lowest gear," so familiar on the Dartmoor roads. Captain Trevelyan, as he had been said, was a man of substance. In spite of this—or perhaps because of it—he was a man who was inordinately fond of money. At the end of October a house-agent in Exhampston wrote to him asking if he would consider letting Sittaford House. A tenant had made inquiries concerning it, wishing to rent it for the winter.

Captain Trevelyan's first impulse was to refuse, his second to demand further information. The tenant in question proved to be a Mrs. Willett, a widow with one daughter. She had recently arrived from South Africa and wanted house on Dartmoor for the winter.

"Damn it all, the women must be mad," said Captain Trevelyan. "Eh, did you say that?"

Burnaby did think so, and said so as forcibly as his friend had done. He said, "Let the fool woman go somewhere else if she wants to freeze. Coming from South Africa, that's her business."

But at this point Captain Trevelyan's money complex asserted itself. Not once in a hundred times would you get a chance of letting your house in midwinter. He demanded what rent the tenant was willing to pay.

An offer of twelve guineas a week clinched matters. Captain Trevelyan went into Exhampston, rented a small house on the outskirts at two guineas a week, and handed over Sittaford House to Mrs. Willett, half the rent to be paid in advance.

"A fool and her money are soon parted," he growled.

But Burnaby was thinking this afternoon, as he scanned Mrs. Willett covertly, that she did not look a fool. She was a tall woman with a rakish smile, but her physiognomy showed a rather than a foolishness. She was inclined to over-dress, had a distinct colonial accent, and seemed perfectly content with the transaction. She was clearly very well off, and that, as Burnaby had reflected more than once, really made the whole affair more odd. She was not the kind of woman one would credit with a passion for solitude.

As a neighbor she had proved almost embarrassingly friendly. In addition to Sittaford House were rained on everybody. Captain Trevelyan was constantly urged to "Treat the house as though we hadn't rented it," Trevelyan, however, was not fond of women. Report went that he had been jilted in his youth. He persistently refused all invitations.

Two months had passed since the installation of the Willetts, and the first wonder at their arrival had passed away.

Burnaby, naturally a silent man, continued to study his hostess, oblivious to any need for small talk. He liked to make himself out a fool, but wasn't really. So he summed up the situation. His glance shifted to Violet. Pretty girl—scrubby, of course—they all were nowadays. What was the good of a woman if she didn't look like a woman? Papers said curves were coming back. About time, too.

He roused himself to the necessity of conversation.

"We were afraid at first that you wouldn't be able to come," said Mrs. Willett. "You said so, you remember. We were so pleased when you said that after all you would."

"Friday," said Major, with an air of being explicit.

Mrs. Willett looked puzzled.

"Every Friday go to Trevelyan's. Tuesday he comes to me. Both of us do it for years."

"Oh! I see. Of course, living so near."

"Kind of habit."

"But do you still keep it up? I mean now that he is living in Exhampston?"

"Pity to break a habit," said Major Burnaby. "We'd both of us miss those evenings."

"You go in for competitions, don't you?"

"No, I don't. At least not the usual ones. I do crosswords. Trevelyan does too. I won three books last month in a crossword competition," he volunteered.

"Oh! really. How nice. Were they interesting books?"

"Don't know. Haven't read them. Looked pretty hopeless."

"It's the winning that matters, isn't it?" said Mrs. Willett, vaguely.

"How do you get to Exhampston?" asked Violet. "You haven't got a car."

"Walk."

"Not really? Six miles. Good exercise. What's twelve miles. Keeps a man fit. Great thing to be fit."

"Fancy! Twelve miles. But both you and Captain Trevelyan were great athletes, weren't you?"

"Used to go to Switzerland together. Winter sports in winter. Climbing in summer. Wonderful man on ice, Trevelyan. Both too old for that sort of thing nowadays."

"You won the army racquets championship, too, didn't you?" asked Violet.

The major blushed like a girl.

"Who told you that?" he mumbled.

"Captain Trevelyan."

"Joe should hold his tongue," said Burnaby. "He talks too much. What's the weather like now?"

Respecting his embarrassment, Violet followed him to the window. They drew the curtains aside and

More snow coming, said Burnaby.

"Have you a message for someone?"

"Yes."

"For me?"

"No."

"For Violet?"

"No."

"For Major Burnaby?"

"Yes."

"It's for you, Major Burnaby. Will you speak to him, please."

The table started rocking slowly. "T R E V—are you sure it's V? It can't be T R E V—it doesn't make sense."

"Trevelyan, of course," said Mrs. Willett. "Captain Trevelyan."

"Do you mean Captain Trevelyan?"

"Yes."

"You've got a message for Captain Trevelyan?"

"No."

"Well, what is then?"

The table began to rock—slowly, rhythmically. So slowly that it was easy to count the letters.

"A pause. 'E-A-D'."

"Somebody is dead?"

Instead of yes or no, the table began to rock again till it reached the letter 'T'.
